Synopsis

FATHERLAND is de nieuwe film van Oscarwinnaar Paweł Pawlikowski (COLD WAR, IDA). Opnieuw toont Pawlikowski op oogverblindende en ingetogen wijze een naoorlogs Europa waarin identiteit en familie botsen. In FATHERLAND spelen Hanns Zischler (MUNICH) en Sandra Hüller (ANATOMY OF A FALL, ZONE OF INTEREST) vader en dochter Thomas en Erika Mann op een cruciaal moment in hun levens.

In de zomer van 1949, op het hoogtepunt van de Koude Oorlog, vertrekken schrijver en Nobelprijswinnaar Thomas Mann (Hanns Zischler) en zijn dochter Erika (Sandra Hüller) op een emotionele roadtrip door het verwoeste en uiteengevallen Duitsland. In een zwarte Buick rijden ze van het door de Verenigde Staten gedomineerde Frankfurt tot het door de Sovjets bezette Weimar. Na zestien jaar ballingschap in de Verenigde Staten wordt Thomas Mann niet alleen geconfronteerd met een verdeeld vaderland, maar ook met een tragedie binnen zijn eigen familie.

FATHERLAND ging in première tijdens het Filmfestival van Cannes, waar Pawlikowski ex aequo werd onderscheiden als Beste Regisseur. De film werd internationaal lovend ontvangen: ★★★★★ 'Another expansive, enriching work from a modern master' (Time Out) - ★★★★★ 'Impossibly elegant' (The Guardian) - 'A perfectly cut jewel of a movie' (The New York Times)

Director: Paweł Pawlikowski

DIRECTOR'S BIOGRAPHY

PAWEŁ PAWLIKOWSKI

DIRECTOR, CO-WRITER, CO-EDITOR

Paweł Pawlikowski is a Polish filmmaker who began his career directing award-winning documentaries before moving into narrative features with LAST RESORT (2000) and MY SUMMER OF LOVE (2004), both BAFTA-winning films.

His film IDA (2013) won the Academy Award for Best International Feature Film, the first Polish film to do so. It also won five European Film Awards, including Best Film, Best Director and Best Screenwriter. COLD WAR (2018) premiered in Competition at the Cannes Film Festival, where Pawlikowski was awarded the Best Director Prize, and later received three Academy Award nominations, including Best Director. It also won five awards at the 2018 European Film Awards, including Best Film, Best Director and Best Screenwriter.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

Like my previous films, FATHERLAND deals with the turmoils of history, with exile and with our transcendental need for home and belonging. It also brings together a dramatic historical moment with a very particular human story. But while the characters in IDA and COLD WAR were invented, at the centre of FATHERLAND we have the historical figures of Thomas Mann and his wayward twins, Erika and Klaus, locked in a triangular family drama. Trying to fuse the personal and the historical in a poignant, mutually enhancing way, we took some liberties with historical facts and their chronology, while trying to stay faithful to the emotional and intellectual truth of the matter...

Mann's return to Germany in 1949 and his attempt to transcend the division and the growing ideological polarisation of his country has obvious contemporary resonances; the old paradigm is dead, the old rules no longer apply, and in their place emerge two crude, mutually exclusive narratives. Narratives which flatten everything, suck oxygen out of the air, corner you into taking sides and slowly make it impossible to see straight and speak freely. For Mann, the only defence against this ideological reduction was Art – the “poetic gaze” which he mentions in one of his speeches, the open eye for the complexities and paradoxes of life.

FATHERLAND brings together many things, but tries to speak simply, in a distilled way, unfolding in graphic images and concentrated scenes, leaving the audience space to feel and imagine.
